Napa, CA – The Napa County Transportation and Planning Agency (NCTPA) is seeking public input for the City of Napa Transit Study that will help identify performance improvements and garner a better understanding of the travel needs and preferences of local residents. Input gathered during the study will provide a basis for future transit improvements and solutions including possible new routes, service frequency changes, and new bus stops.

The NCTPA will be hosting an informal day long Drop-In Information Table on January 26, at the VINE Transit Center (located at 1151 Pearl Street, Napa). The public will have the opportunity to provide input on current and future transit needs for Napa and is encouraged to stop by the table anytime between 7:00 a.m. and 7:00 p.m. Staff will be available to talk one on one with community members to better understand the specific needs for the City of Napa. Light refreshments will be provided. Requests for a Spanish interpreter or ADA accommodations should be made no later than January 24th by calling the VINE Customer Service Office at (707) 251-2800.

Those unable to visit the Drop-In Information Table on January 26 can stay connected to NCTPA's efforts and provide direct feedback by participating in the online survey at www.napatransitstudy.com. Working with the community and hearing your direct input is incredibly valuable in addressing local transit issues that will affect our community for years to come.

NCTPA serves as the countywide transportation planning body for the incorporated and unincorporated areas within Napa County. NCTPA is responsible for programming State and Federal funding for transportation projects and services within the County, including the maintenance and improvements of highways, streets, roads, and bicycle transit, bus system operation and management, and oversight of the planning and funding of paratransit.
